Poem: A Child's Nightmare by Robert Graves
Through long nursery nights he stood
By my bed unwearied,
Loomed gigantic, formless, queer,
Purring in my haunted ear
That same hideous nightmare thing,
Talking, as he lapped my blood,
In a voice cruel and flat,
Saying for ever,
"Cat!..."

However, a recent survey suggests that there is a more pressing concern – it's actually the pressure of not having the perfect smile that is giving children nightmares. A survey of 1500 British parents found that 18% of children aged five and under have had nightmares about their oral health, while 12% have experienced nightmares so bad that they have woken up.

Soooo I decided to make some random thing where Nightmare and friends has a kid living with them. This will kinda just be a bunch of one shots with the reader. (Y/N) is around 6 and has magic, but they don't use it much. I'll refer to (Y/N) as they/them, but feel free to insert your gender there! You can also give suggestions for any ideas you have!
